PALACE PADLOCKED; SHERIFF'S AUCTION IS SET FOR AUG. 1

Replevin Writs Complicate
Legal Tangle in Foreclosure Suit

NO BOXING FRIDAY

Uncertainty regarding the holding of the regular amateur boxing show at the Antioch Palace Friday night was definitely settled in the negative late last night when H. P. Lowry, chattel holder, caused the removal of ring, chairs, floor covering, lighting equipment, and other property from the Palace.

Mr. Lowry, acting upon his rights as mortgagor of the ring paraphernalia, yesterday obtained a writ of replevin from the circuit clerk, the action following the posting of notices Monday to the effect that the contents of the Palace would go on the auction block August 1.

Armed with the writ of replevin, Lowry came to Antioch and gave the order to Deputy Sheriff Richard Allner for execution, but Allner refused to act until the okay was given by Sheriff Doolittle. Diligent search failed to reveal the whereabouts of the Sheriff yesterday afternoon, but a voice from the sheriff's office in response to a phone call from Lake Villa late yesterday said that the sheriff was in. But that was too late—it was Deputy Sheriff Sidney Dibble of Lake Villa, who gave truckmen access to the Palace last night.

With the posting of the notices Monday the Palace was closed tight by Sheriff Lawrence A. Doolittle at the request of counsel for C. K. Anderson, surety, and Leo Dailey, receiver.

WEEK-END TORRID WAVE SMASHES HEAT RECORD

Scorching Wind and Heat
Endanger Farmers'
Crops

Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, three days of blistering heat. Thermometers became so delirious under the unwonted strain that many of them broke their bounds, and registered things which no sane self-respecting heat recorder would dream of doing under any circumstances.

But can we blame them, when even the official thermometer of John Lauz of Waukegan, local government observer, recorded a height of 102 degrees Sunday at 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon, daylight saving time, breaking the new record which had been set on Saturday, when at the same hour, 101½ degrees were registered? Saturday, determined not to pass into oblivion without distinguishing itself in some small (or high) degree, had broken the record set Friday when the official thermometer recorded 100½ degrees.

Observer Lauz is quoted as saying that never since the establishment of the government bureau has there been a spell of such intense and constant heat.

Farmers are fearing for their corn and potato crops, not alone on account of the heat, but because of the conspicuous absence of any "real" rain during the past couple of weeks. The northern lakes and woods were thronged by city and village dwellers who sought to escape the scorching rays of Old Sol.

Frank Hunt Buys Miniature Golf Course in Antioch

Frank Hunt is now owner and manager of the Little Put-Put golf course on the Rosing & Wedge property just south of the postoffice building. The deal was completed Monday when Mr. Hunt purchased the interests of Mrs. Esther Gibson, builder of the course, and took over the lease of the grounds.

Mrs. Gibson owns and operates a similar course and also a lunch stand on Grand avenue in Fox Lake.

DANIEL HARRIS DIES AFTER AUTO ACCIDENT

Death Comes Unexpectedly To Former Antioch Business Man

Dan Harris, 33, former partner of Ted Poulos at the Antioch Cafe, died suddenly Saturday morning at 7:40 at the St. Therese hospital, Waukegan, as a result of injuries received on the preceding Saturday when his car crashed into a concrete culvert on Belvidere road near Grayslake, a coroner's jury, holding the inquest into the death, announced Sunday morning. Dr. J. L. Taylor conducted the inquiry.

Mr. Harris, since moving from Antioch last August, has been operating the Harris cafe, 218 Washington street.

Mr. Harris' death came very unexpectedly, as he was thought to have been recovering rapidly. In fact, he was considered sufficiently well to be moved from the hospital to his home at 128 South St. James street, Saturday morning. However, he suddenly became worse, and died shortly after the attending physicians had been summoned.

Lost Control of Car
On Saturday, July 12, Mr. Harris, his baby daughter, Jean, and the child's nurse, Miss Lorraine Simpson, were driving on Belvidere road near Grayslake when Mr. Harris, who was driving the machine, lost control of the car after striking a large rock in the road and crashed into a culvert.

Taken to the hospital, X-ray pictures revealed several fractured ribs, and the man was thought well enough Friday to be discharged from the hospital. However, during the night his condition became serious and death followed.

His daughter and the maid were not injured in the accident.

Poulos' Partner for 15 Years
Sixteen years ago, Dan Harris and Ted Poulos met in Utah. They came to Chicago, where they were partners in business until five years ago, when they came to Antioch and purchased the Antioch Cafe. Last August the two men dissolved the partnership when Harris sold his interests in the business to Poulos. For the past year Harris has been the proprietor of a restaurant in Waukegan.

Survived by Widow and Daughter
Funeral services were held Tuesday at 1:00 p.m. from the chapel, 622 Blue Island avenue, under the auspices of Sequoia chapter, No. 827, Masonic Lodge of Antioch. Services at the St. Constantine church, 6105 South Michigan avenue and intersection at Evergreen cemetery.

Worker Shot by Angry Man At Slocum Lake Monday

George Colgate, 60, angered because Tony Giancola, a workman, continued to shovel dirt from a sewer ditch onto his lawn in Williams Park at Slocum Lake, shot the workman, injuring his cheek, chest and shoulder, making it necessary for him to undergo an operation, was soon able to go to his home in Chicago. The shooting occurred at 5:30 Monday evening. There will probably be no action taken as Giancola refused to sign a warrant for Colgate's arrest.

Paving Bids Will Include Mile and a Half in Lake County

Springfield, Ill., July 24—Bids for paving projects which is estimated will cost approximately $3,000,000 will be received by Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets, on August 6th. Included among the proposed jobs are several widening projects in the metropolitan area.

The bidding involves only a mile and a half of paving in Lake county, which includes two short pavement gaps on Route 176 near Wauconda.

LOTUS BEDS AGAIN UNFOLD THEIR BLOOMS

Blossoms Are Finer and More Numerous Than Last Year

The rare, ever-miraculous beauty of the Lotus flower is again revealed to all who are wise enough to banish the cares of everyday routine and the trivialities of a hundred city existence.

Every year thousands of tourists, sightseers, scientists, and nature lovers revel in the wondrous beauty of the glossy flower with its royal richness of color. Pilgrims come from all parts of the world to view what might well be termed the "eighth wonder of the world."

Five years ago the waters of Grass Lake rose above their usual level, and the blossoms were covered. It was feared at that time that the plants might be exterminated. Every effort has been made to restore them to their former luxurious profusion. Although they have not yet reached the number of "before the flood," they are becoming thicker every year.

"Yes, there will be as many as last year," says Ray Pregeren, who has watched the blooming of the Lotus for many years. "In fact, I wouldn't be surprised if there will be nearly twice as many. The blossoms are exceptionally fine this year, and we expect them to be at the height of their glory this Sunday. Boats are run every day. No one should miss the opportunity of taking an excursion and seeing for themselves that which no one can satisfactorily describe."

Special sightseeing excursions are being arranged, which will include not only the famous lotus beds but the upper waters of Fox Lake, Pista-kee Bay, and Nippersink lake.

Cotton Blossom Singers to Entertain at The Methodist Church

On Monday evening, July 28, a colored male quartet from Piney Woods, Mississippi, will give a musical program at the Methodist church. These Radio Artists have a selection of Negro Spirituals and Plantation Melodies which they sing in their own inimitable way. These young men represent the Piney Woods school, which is a school for the colored people of the south. If you are a lover of this type of music which these musicians are capable of bringing do not miss this opportunity of hearing them. Admission charge of 25 and 50 cents will be made.

TIMELY TOPICS BY ANTIOTH PEOPLE

By REV. PHILIP T. BOHI

We have all heard the old saying, "The best things are always done up in small packages." History has revealed that not infrequently men of great ability and leadership have been men of small stature physically. It is said of Saint Paul of the New Testament that he was a man of small stature and yet was without a peer as a promoter of the Kingdom of God. Napoleon was a little man and yet few if any military leaders have been his equal. One of the keenest minds of any man I have ever met was that of a man who weighed less than 125 pounds.

In proportion to the rest of his body his brain capacity must have been much less than that of the average man and yet there are few friends in which this master mind had not played deeply.

Little things in life produce big results for good and for evil," someone has said. It was the rat in the fable which gnawed the net and freed the lion. A small kind of rat, according to some scientists, destroyed the race of giant dinosaurs which once roamed the country in which we live, by gnawing at their feet. According to others, the dinosaurs were wiped out when volcanic eruptions filled the atmosphere with dust, making it unfit for the monsters to breathe and cutting off the full force of the sun's rays which dinosaurs needed.

In a great dike a hole so small that a child could stop it with its finger would, if not closed immediately, destroy the dike and flood a vast territory destroying many homes and taking many lives. It was believed at one time that rats carried and spread the dreadful disease known as the Bubonic Plague. Through investigation and experimentation it was discovered that it was a flea on the rat instead of the rat itself. A germ so small that it cannot be seen

GLIDER CLUB TO GIVE BALL HERE JULY 30

An "aviation" ball will be given under the auspices of the Antioch Glider club at the Antioch Palace Wednesday night, July 30, it was announced by club members this week.

Music will be by the "Mellow Maniacs," a local six-piece orchestra, and the embryo aviators are preparing for a real time. For one "buck" you may dance to your heart's content, and may bring as many ladies as you desire, as no additional charge will be made for "extras."

Proceeds from the ball will be used for the benefit of the Glider club, especially for making repairs of the badly damaged Detroit-Gull glider that was badly damaged Sunday when one of the members took a bad spill just after leaving the ground. No one was hurt in the accident.

The public is invited to attend the ball.

MRS. ETHEL BRAIN COMMITS SUICIDE

Former Antioch Woman
Ends Life by Hanging
With Necktie

Using her husband's necktie, Mrs. Ethel Brain hanged herself in the bathroom of her home at Milwaukee late Monday evening. The reason given for the suicide was despondency over ill health.

Mr. and Mrs. Brain took over the management of the Antioch Hotel after Mr. McMannis moved away. Nearly two years ago, they moved to Milwaukee, and the lease on the hotel property was given over to the present proprietor, C. E. Waldo.

Mrs. Brain is survived by her husband and two children.

Third Lake is Scene of Suicide by Hanging

Mrs. Clara Knowles, 54, of Chicago, hanged herself in the sun parlor of her sister's summer cottage at Third Lake at 11:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. When found by her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Eger, ten minutes later, she was dead. She died of strangulation, having so placed herself that her body hung suspended from a cord. It is thought that she was despondent because of ill-health, since her operation in Chicago over a month ago.

SEARCH CONTINUES FOR BODY OF SIXTH DROWNING VICTIM

Body Found on North Shore
As Yet Unidentified As Conrad Rehn

Search continued in Lake Catherine late today for the body of Howard Bong, 14 year-old Chicago lad, the sixth drowning victim who lost his life in Lake county waters over the weekend. The firemen and deputy sheriffs are dragging the lake with nets, and exerting every effort to locate the boy's body.

North Beach waters yesterday morning gave up the body of an unidentified man, believed by authorities to be that of Conrad Rehn, 27, Norway, Michigan, who was drowned Sunday afternoon in Lake Michigan, near the mouth of Dead River. Rehn, with his sister, Mrs. C. J. Johnson, of 2435 Rosemont avenue, Chicago, and a group of friends, were having a picnic along the lake near Big Dead river. Rehn waded into the lake to fill a coffee pot with water and was pulled down by the undertow. He could not swim and was swept beneath the water. The body was found half a mile away from the river's mouth five feet from the water's edge, nearly buried by drifting sand, by Webster Dailey.

There are two facts which indicate that the corpse might be someone other than Rehn. First, that this man appears to be over 30 years of age, while Rehn was but 27, and second that the name of E. Griffiths was found engraved on the belt of his swimming suit.

After much difficulty, the body was removed to the White & Tobin Morgue, where it awaits identification.

The four other drowning victims of the week are:

WATCHING OUR DOLLARS WORK

Editorials have been written on "Trading at Home" until the subject is a little bit shopworn.

This editorial, the same as the Community Welfare page in another part of the paper, is taking up the subject of local investment not from the old "Trade at Home" angle, but from the commonsense angle of watching our dollars work for us.

Dollars invested in Antioch go to build buildings in Antioch. They work in Antioch. Dollars spent elsewhere work elsewhere. And except for the temporary glamour of dealing with strangers, what advantage do we get out of trading elsewhere than at home?

The three points brought out on the accompanying page answer this question quite effectively.

The question in the end simmers down into the fact that the amount of money that the average business man makes on the merchandise that goes through his hands would best be invested by him and by you, through spending it with him in your own home town where you can see it work.

Too often when we think we are getting "better bargains" in some other town, we find when we have considered the cost of transportation to and from, compared the prices and the quality, considered the loss in time it takes, about all we have gained is a business trip, rather than a pleasure trip.

Antioch business men do not say "Trade at Home." They say, "Try First at Home." Not one of them would say that a customer should pay more or secure a poorer quality from a local business man, but all of them are striving to give the best quality and the best price because they realize that therein lies not only a greater measure of service to you, but their own future prosperity.

And in the end, it resolves itself into a matter of co-operation of "All for one, and one for all." Just as the members of a family work together for their own best interests, so should the members of this community family of Antioch work together for all our own best interests, and this is only one way in which we can do this to good advantage.

EDUCATION REDUCES CHILD ACCIDENTS

A primary reason for the steadily increasing toll of automobile accidents is that we have attempted to meet changed conditions with old, inadequate laws.

In many states traffic laws have not been revised to any extent since the ox-cart days. More and more cars throng highways. Congestion increases. Speed ranges rise. The chance of accident grows constantly greater. And until traffic laws are modernized and standardized, the accident problem will increase.

Last year our laxity resulted in the deaths of 31,000 persons and untold property damage. Only a few states make it necessary for a driver, before using the public highways, to learn how to operate his car and understand the rules of the road. In the others anyone, irrespective of his competence, is allowed to drive a high-powered, potentially deadly vehicle on crowded highways, where he is a menace to the lives and property of all other motorists.

The bright spot in the traffic situation is the condition respecting children. The adoption of safety teaching by progressive schools throughout the nation has resulted in an amazing decrease in accidents to children. Such a demonstration should encourage more intensive efforts in the future.

Accident prevention has been greatly aided by casualty insurance companies. The public should join whole-heartedly in efforts to reduce uncalled-for accidents.

ROADS AND UNEMPLOYMENT

Iowa is showing the nation how to relieve unemployment and, at the same time, benefit the public.

The state has accelerated its highway program. Thirty thousand workmen on Iowa roads will earn $18,000,000 this year. And a multitude of cities, towns and rural communities will enjoy the prosperity that always accompanies intensive road building.

At the end of 1920 nine-tenths of its roads were mud. At the end of 1930, eight-tenths of them will be surfaced.

The greatest present road need is the construction of practical and comparatively inexpensive secondary, farm-to-market highways that will give agricultural communities all-year contact with their markets. The American Farm Bureau Federation has repeatedly pointed out that so long as 5,000,000 of the 6,250,000 American farmers are barred from these markets during several months of the year by mud, we will have a farm problem of increasing seriousness.

The modern application of asphalt and road oils to dirt, macadam and gravel surfaces is making possible the building of tens of thousands of miles of low-cost, waterproof surfaced, secondary roads which would have been out of the question a decade ago.

While it is possible that the Bible has not reached all the world, it certainly has found its way into most parts. There are one hundred and eight complete translations and some five hundred partial translations of this great work. Dividend
Printing

There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment. A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read. The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

HintsIf You Had a
Million DollarsBy THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Would you work if you did not have to do so? If by some unexpected circumstances you should fall heir to a million dollars, how would that fact change your present plans and your present occupation? Would you farm, or keep store or run the garage?

The curse of Eden was that because of his dereliction Adam should in the future earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. Not that he had been wholly idle before his misstep, for his job had been to keep the garden trimmed up, to dig about things a little, and the work was apparently pleasant and all but negligible.

Nothing has engaged scientists and engineers more during the last twenty-five years than the devising and construction of labor-saving machines. Everything that could possibly reduce or ameliorate work has been haled with delight. We seem not to enjoy work. Anything that will reduce the hours of labor or make our jobs a little softer and a little more comfortable we received with enthusiasm. Middle-aged people—young fellows even—look forward to the time when they will not be enslaved by the mandates of a job, but will be free to do nothing and to come and go as they like.

I have watched the men in an office with which I am acquainted—fifty of them possibly and all under twenty-five years of age. They come hurrying in in the morning, a little late often, and settle down with evident reluctance to the routine of the day. Almost any one of them could be replaced without embarrassment or loss to the organization. They are earning a living, but only a small per cent of them care for the job they are holding or would keep it if keeping it were not necessary to existence. If these fellows should each come suddenly into the possession of a million dollars they probably would not look inside of the office again.

One of the professors at an eastern university recently sent out a questionnaire to two groups of professional men and women propounding this question of what their procedure would be if they had a million dollars suddenly given to them. Eighty-one per cent of the teachers addressed said that they would give up teaching if it were possible to do so, and 67 per cent of nurses agreed that under similar conditions they would give up nursing. That is, an overwhelming majority showed that they were not especially interested in their work as such but clung to it merely because it furnished them a living.

If it is generally true that the great majority of men—laboring men and professional men—are working only because they must, if you keep to your job simply because it affords you and your family subsistence or even a comfortable living, then there are a great many jobs being badly done.

Every one should enjoy his work; he should like it so well that even if he should fall heir to a million dollars he would go on loving it and doing his best in it.

ASHERBET with the meat sugar is a most welcome addition to the hot-weather luncheon or dinner. Adding to the diet the healthful fruit juices, and through its sugar content, one of the most important energy elements, the sherbet's cooling qualities and delicate flavor help to make the repast a noteworthy occasion whether dining en famille or entertaining honored guests.

Another point not to be overlooked by the wise hostess is the aesthetic factor. Served in footed glasses in pastel shades of rose, amber, azure, green or topaz, the ice cup strikes a note of color that does more than its share in assuring the colorful charm demanded for the perfectly arranged summer table.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Life" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 20.

The Golden Text was, "Understanding is a wellspring of life unto him that hath it" (Proverbs 10:22).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "I have set the Lord always before me; because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved. Thou wilt shew me the path of life; in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore" (Psalm 16: 8, 11).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "To divest thought of false trusts and material evidences in order that the spiritual facts of being may appear,—this is the great attainment by means of which we shall sweep away the false and give place to the true" (p. 428).

Salesman Kills Bear
as Lumberjacks Hide

Longmont, Col.—Matching an old-fashioned rifle and his nerve against a huge black bear charging on a sawmill camp, Herbert Sullivan, Longmont salesman, killed the animal with his first shot.

Sullivan sells automobiles and has rarely fired a gun since his boyhood days on Fourth of July.

He had barely reached the sawmill in Big Elk Park, 30 miles west of Longmont, to deliver a new car, when a hale lumberjack dashed into camp, shouting "The bears are after us."

Sullivan asked if they had any firearms and was handed an old-time 45-70 rifle. He went out alone.

A few rods from the camp he saw two bears. They saw him at the same time, and one, a female, charged down upon him.

Sullivan aimed at its head as it rose on its hind feet and let go. The bullet struck the bear in the jaw and passed through its head. The other bear fled.

Sullivan told the story to friends here and brought the bear home to prove it. The animal weighed 250 pounds.

WILL CONDUCT FREE CLINIC FOR CHILDREN OF PRE-SCHOOL AGE

Plans Are Completed for Examination of Children August First

Waukegan, Ill., July 24 — Final plans for a county wide clinic for children of pre-school age have reached the stage where the Lake County Medical society and Dental society, assisted by the Lake County Tuberculosis association, will be in a position to conduct these examinations during the first two weeks in August.

The clinics, as projected, will provide a series of complete medical and dental examinations without cost to the youngsters.

The children who are to be included in this work are those who are to enter the first grade in September.

The purpose of the undertaking is to make sure that every child is physically perfect and free from disease. A complete examination by the family physician and the family dentist should be required before any child should be allowed to enter school, in the opinions of the representatives of the medical and the dental societies. Since this cannot be done at the present time, it is pointed out, it has been necessary for doctors and dentists to donate their time and energy without cost for the happiness and success of parents, teachers and school children of the county.

Anyone in Lake county wishing to have their children examined in such clinic is urged to write to the Pre-School Child Clinic, 503 North Milwaukee avenue, Libertyville, Ill., or before August 1. This, it must be remembered, includes only those children who will enter school for the first time next fall.

The alarming figures obtained from the United States Government which trace a large percentage of the failures in class work directly to ill health and physical defects that could be corrected at a minimum of cost and exertion on the part of a doctor or dentist first interested the three organizations in pooling their forces to relieve suffering among county youngsters.

"No real father or mother in Lake county would willingly allow their child to enter school in a condition in which it could not keep up with the rest of the children in studies and at play. If the child is not able to see or hear but half what the normal child does it is going to be a sad life, if unaided. If kidney and heart disease is present, it may be found too late. Bad teeth lead to many serious complications that can be prevented," the doctors declare.

Cuckoo (the Clock Kind)

Always Is in Season

Morehead City, N.C.—It may be illegal to shoot song birds but Jim Kelly got away with shooting the "cuckoo" in the clock. Game Warden Silas Brown said he was not justified in arresting Kelly for picking off the artificial bird. Jim was awakened at 3 a.m. by the cuckoo clock. He reached for a shotgun, fired at the bird and the noise ceased immediately. The bird retired in fragments behind its doors.

Hole

A property owner went to inspect one of his houses and found that some scamp had stolen the building, leaving only the cellar. This would seem to leave a whole lot to be looked into.

CHANNEL LAKE COUNTRY CLUB NEWS

The extreme heat of the last weekend was no damper on the spirit of the golfers at the Channel Lake Country club, and the course was well filled on Saturday and Sunday and several matches were played off.

However, the card party on Saturday night was not so well attended, there being only a small group of eighteen present, but these small parties are always jolly ones, and this was no exception. The first prizes went to Mrs. Max Mauermaier and Charles Latlin, and the second to Mrs. L. R. Phillips and Dr. Wm. K. Gray.

At the Ladies' Card party Tuesday there were ten tables, the luncheon hostesses being Mrs. J. N. Tankersley, Mrs. Jurdin, Mrs. J. H. Sandell, and Mrs. Charles Laflin. The prizes were awarded to Mrs. James Lytle, Mrs. Mary K. Smart, and Mrs. Ward E. Potter, and the guest prize went to Mrs. Van der Kloot of Chicago, a guest of Mrs. W. S. Mills of Lake Marie.

THREE FIRES MENACE FOX LAKE BUILDINGS

Church Damaged; Cottages, Berry Patch Destroyed by Fire

The first of the three fires to break out at Fox Lake Sunday, started at about 11:00 o'clock in the morning, at the Fox Lake Community church, shortly after the Sunday school children had assembled in their places. Mrs. Wanda Bennett, who was in charge of the class, was the first to notice anything amiss. Smelling the odor of insulation, she glanced into the assembly room and beheld smoke pouring from the stage. After the children had marched in orderly lines, the fire department was called. Church members and vacationists helped fight the flames, but not until after an hour's strenuous labor on the part of the Fox Lake Fire department were the flames controlled. The damage was estimated at $2,500. The fire was caused from crossed wires in the assembly room.

Members of the board of trustees met shortly after the fire and made plans for rebuilding the church.

Two Cottages Burned

Several hours later a blaze believed to have been started by a burning cigarette thrown aside by a passing motorist, started near the railroad ties, and spread rapidly to the section occupied by the newly built cottages of Sullivan's Hillcrest subdivision. Two cottages were burned to the ground. For a time the entire section was threatened, and only through the combined efforts of the Fox Lake, Round Lake, Antioch, and Grayslake fire departments was the conflagration stopped. For three hours the whole village was in danger of being razed.

The great difficulty lay in the fact that the recently installed water system at Fox Lake failed to operate, and 2,000 feet of hose had to be laid to the lake to pump water. The fire swept more than 100 acres.

Blueberry Patch Burns

While the second fire was in progress, a third broke out on the estate of W. H. Brandenburg located west of Fox Lake. It raged through a blueberry patch, and became a dangerous grass fire, but before it could reach the farm buildings or a large wheat field, the Ingleside fire department had it checked. More than 2,000 gallons of water were necessary to extinguish the flames.

Little Hope Is Held Out for Solution of Mystery in Fox Lake Killings

Inquiry into the deaths of Sam Pellar, Michael Quirk, and Joseph Bertsche, victims of the Fox Lake gang massacre June 1, was scheduled to be held at the inquest by John L. Taylor today.

The delay has been caused by the serious illness of George Druggan and Mrs. Vivian Ponie McGinnis, who were wounded at the time. It now appears that Druggan will have little to offer.

Two More Dead

Robert Long, uncle of Terry and George Druggan, who escaped being shot down by the machine gun squad when he retired to his room with a headache, died at Rochester, Minn. George "Red" McLaughlin has been found in a drainage canal.

Warrants have been out for the other members of the party. It is not known how many will be present.

ANTIOCH BUILDER GETS CONTRACTS

Vincent B. Dupre, local contractor, was awarded the contract for building a garage at the Lake county farm at Libertyville recently. Dupre was low bidder, the building committee of the board of supervisors announced.

Dupre also has the contract for repairing the damage done last Sunday to the Fox Lake Community church.

Infant Daughter Dies at Pikeville Friday

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence White of Pikeville lost their infant daughter, Verna June, on Friday morning, following a severe attack of indigestion. Mrs. White arrived from Chetek, Wis., Saturday. The baby was born June 2, of this year. Interment was in Hickory cemetery.

Intense Magnification

Living organisms now can be studied through a microscope that magnifies as much as 12,500 diameters as the result of a heat filter to prevent the strong light that has to be used from killing the specimens.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The public school system of England was introduced by the Foster education act of 1870. Before the public schools were introduced into England the schools were largely denominational.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

Forty-seventh street, from Sixth to Seventh avenue, is lined with theatres, hotels and little eating places. Damon Runyon calls this block "Dream Street," but I think that almost every street in New York might be called that; even the fashionable ones. This city where people come from all over the world, and often their baggage consists of the little dreams, and the lonesome dreams, and the dreams that they thought were true; the dimmer dreams of the older years, and the golden dreams of youth. New York's famous skyline is the result of the dreams of boys from the farm, or ranch, or little town. There is tangible proof of that in such structures as the Woolworth tower, or the Chrysler building, or Madison Square garden.

One of the proprietors of the stand for out-of-town and foreign newspapers, at Broadway and Forty-third street, put two of his brothers through Yale, and one of them is now teaching at a southern university.

Frank Daniels is an old-time comic opera star who never will need any benefits. He cleaned up on real estate on the East river and in Rye.

There are opportunities in New York. One man ran a two-cent stamp into $2,000,000. This was E. V. P. Ritter, who saw the land where the Grand Central Palace now stands and conceived the idea of air rights over the tracks. His investment was a letter he wrote to Mr. Neumann, then president of the New York Central. Mr. Ritter got an appointment, sold his idea and got financial backing. Later he sold the building to the Du Ponts. It is now owned by a syndicate. Since that time numerous big structures have been built over the tracks. One of the latest to be so constructed will be the new Waldorf.

A car, parked at the corner of Forty-fourth street and Sixth avenue, in some manner caught fire under the hood. A helpful passerby turned on an alarm. Now a call from this district—the hippodrome is there—is automatically a three alarm fire. From all directions apparatus came with clangling gongs. Three engines; three hose carts; three hook and ladders; deputy fire chiefs in red roadsters; all rushed to the scene. Last to arrive was the fire tower, which made a swell two-wheel turn and drew up in style. Meanwhile, someone had put out the fire with a pall of sand.

Leslie Thrasher is reported to be the highest paid cover artist in the country. They say that his original contract called for $1,000 a cover and that his new contract calls for $1,200. The illustrator who probably makes the most money is Russell Patterson. He is just now on the crest of the wave, and nets as much as ever the most famous of the cartoonists.

Some time ago, Wallace Morgan, often called the illustrators' illustrator, broke his ankle. It was a bad break and the surgeon who mended it took professional pride in the job. He had all sorts of X-ray pictures taken and the breaks in the ankle showed up splendidly. One day the surgeon showed these pictures to Jack Duncan, the painter, as exhibits well worthy of admiration. Mr. Duncan looked at them critically. "I think," he said emphatically, "that they flatter him."

Riding a short distance in a taxi-cab, David Wallace, playwright and producer, offered a dollar bill for a fifty cent charge. The driver protested that his last passenger had taken all his change, but offered to match a dollar or nothing. Amused, Mr. Wallace took him up, slipping a ten cent piece. The driver called and lost.

"Here," said Mr. Wallace, "take the dollar. There is fifty cents on your clock and I don't want you to lose it." "Don't try to patronize me, just because I am driving a taxi," said the man, "I own 12 of these blasted cars."

Boys and safety are going out together. Strange hairpins found around the premises are once more responsible for a lot of trouble.

Frieda Mueller, who runs a flower shop on the East Side, used to be a gardener and table decorator in the royal palace at Potsdam. Part of her present business is decorating tables for large dinners and banquets.

Clemont Inn, on Riverside drive, was once Washington's headquarters during the Revolutionary war. Now it is run as a restaurant by the father-in-law of Vinnie Richards, the tennis player.

Musical Powder Box

Acts as Burglar Alarm

Valley Center, Kan.—A boudoir powder puff caused a man hunt which was climaxed by gun play. Miss Bertha Robinson was awakened at dawn by a musical powder box, released when a negro burglar lifted a powder puff from her dressing table.

The city marshal, Harve Ogdan, was summoned and gave chase. Ogdan captured the negro near Wichita and recovered a watch from him. As the marshal examined the timepiece the negro seized Ogdan's pistol, shot the officer through the leg and escaped.

STILL OPERATORS IN COURT TODAY

Four of the men taken at the giant distillery in Wauconda township last week today were scheduled to appear before County Judge Perry L. Persons in county court to answer to the charge of manufacture and possession of alcohol.

Those named in the informations are George Sternstoffer of Wauconda and Tony Russo, Thomas Flannigan and Tony Calabrese, all of Chicago.

The raiders, operating out of the police, sheriff's and state's attorney's offices, confiscated more than 200 gallons of alcohol at the plant and destroyed the equipment and mash which held value of close to $50,000, Sheriff Lawrence Doolittle said.

Russo and Flannigan, who claimed they were sent to the tree-hidden farm house by Chicago employment agency, were taken in custody when the sheriff's men raided the place on information received by Col. Smith. The two others were seized later by deputies who guarded the farmhouse.

LOVE PIRACY "MAN" EXPOSED AS WOMAN

Wed Girl When Her Brother Backed Down

Minneapolis, Minn.—For 24 years Eva Mary Hotalling lived as a man because she could get better jobs and earn more money. She even married a girl to save the family honor when her brother fled to avoid responsibility. And now she has been named as the "man" who stole a married woman's affections!

The suit was filed in the shape of a divorced complaint by Edward S. Halstad, prominent and well-to-do jeweler, against Mrs. Maureen Hallstad, who, he charges, treated him "cruelly and inhumanly" after she met "Donald Hotalling," which is the name under which Eva Mary has gone for almost a quarter of a century.

Secret is Bared.

Halstad's amazement when he learned that his supposed rival was a woman—a fact that reached the authorities because some close to Mrs. Halstad babble—may be imagined. He and his wife have been estranged for some time as a result, she said, of threats which he made against her life.

When she sued for divorce he retaliated by naming the supposed man who had been a frequent visitor at his home and whose friendliness with his wife he believed to be due to a clandestine love affair between them.

Miss Hotalling, admitting she was the "Donald" named in the jeweler's complaint, expressed regret that she had been found out and her sex revealed.

"I was just sixteen when I first donned male attire," she said. "It was not done as a lark, but as the result of a deliberate plan when, seeking work, I discovered that it was very hard for a girl to get a decent job at living wages."

Saves Brother's Name.

To detectives she said that when her brother, Donald, refused to marry a girl who was in trouble through him, she took his place and led her to the altar. For seven years they lived together, she said, and not even the girl's own family knew the truth until she died in 1923.

After an investigation the authorities held that if Eva Mary chose to wear trousers and call herself Donald there was nothing that could be done about it legally and she was permitted to go about her affairs.

Corrects Line of Poe on Statue, Is Jailed

Baltimore—Inensed by a superfluous letter carved upon the Poe memorial statue in a park here, Edmond Fontaine, a plant pathologist, recently carried out a recently published threat that he would clip off the plural "s" in the carved script from Poe's "Raven," "Dreaming dreams no mortals ever dared to dream before."

Thus read the inscription on the face of the monument while accepted editions of Poe's works have the word "mortals" instead of the plural form. Fontaine is under arrest.

Asserting that the erasure made the line perfect and that there was no defacement of the monument because the letter was at the end of a line, Fontaine said: "Police say I had no business to do it, which is true, but art and poetry cannot bear up under the strain of seven years' waiting to have that error corrected. Poe himself would suffer agonies over such neglect by the Baltimore public."

New Yellowstone Span

Sidney, Mont.—Richland county's electorate has given Montana's building program added impetus by approving at the polls the proposed $85,000 bond issue which will help finance construction of a new bridge across the Yellowstone river east of Sidney. Construction of the span will entail expenditure of $350,000, of which federal and state governments will contribute $265,000.

STATE TAX MEN AND BANKERS IN ACCORD.

Months of Negotiation Lead to Agreement on Changes Broadening Method of State or Local Taxation of National Banks.

NEW YORK.—Months of conference and negotiation between an American Bankers Association special committee and the Committee of the Association of States on Bank Taxation have resulted in an agreement on a form of amendment to the Federal statute dealing with state or local taxation of national banks that "maintains the integrity of the protective principles of the section and is satisfactory to the commissioners' committee," says the American Bankers Association Journal.

Thomas B. Paton, the organization's General Counsel, in making the announcement says that previously proposed amendments to the statute, which is known as Section 5219, have been opposed when it was felt their terms would enable any state to place banks in a tax class by themselves.

"The law as it stands today," Mr. Paton says, "permits state or local taxation of national banks or their shareholders in one or the other of the four following forms: the shareholders upon their shares—a property tax; the shareholders upon their dividends—a personal income tax; the bank upon its net income; the bank according to or measured by its net income. Only one form of tax can be imposed, except that the dividend tax may be combined with the third or fourth form if other corporations and shareholders are likewise taxed."

"The conditions permitted are: the tax on shares must be at no greater rate than on other competing moneyed capital; the income tax on shareholders must be at no greater rate than on net income from other moneyed capital; the tax on bank net income must be at no higher rate than on other financial corporations nor the highest rates on mercantile and manufacturing corporations doing business within the state; the tax measured by net bank income is subject to the same limitations as the tax on net income of the bank but may include entire net income from all sources."

States Seek Broader Law

National banks and their shareholders are taxed in different states under a diversity of systems, he says. The U. S. Supreme Court has held that the low millage rate on intangible personal property is in violation of the present law where it results in national bank shares being taxed at a rate greater than that assessed upon competing moneyed capital. A number of states, unwilling to use the income method permitted, had the alternative of either repealing the intangible tax laws or limiting taxation of national bank shares at the intangible rate. Therefore they sought a broadening of the permissive provisions.

Also, Mr. Paton points out, a Supreme Court decision held a state's excise tax on corporations invalid where it included income from Federal and local government bonds in the excise measure. This created doubt as to some state bank excise taxes.

"Conferences have been held to reach some agreement which would protect the banks, satisfy the tax commissioners and avoid contest in Congress," Mr. Paton says. "From the standpoint of the tax authorities, the main objectives have been an amendment which would permit certain states to retain their low rate tax upon intangibles and at the same time derive an adequate, but not excessive, revenue from national bank shares, and an amendment which would permit certain states to tax corporations on their net income, excluding income from tax-exempts, and at the same time derive the same revenue from the banks as heretofore. From the standpoint of the banks, it has been deemed imperative to maintain the protective principles of Section 5219."

The Changes Agreed On

"In the proposed amendment the existing provision permitting taxation of bank shares no higher than the ratio upon competing moneyed capital has been modified with respect to certain intangible tax states only by a provision under which, instead of the moneyed capital limitation, the rate shall not be greater than the rate upon the shares of other financial corporations, nor upon the net assets of individuals, partnerships or associations employed in the banking, loan or investment business, nor higher than the rate assessed upon mercantile, manufacturing and business corporations with head office in the state."

"Also an added fifth alternative permissive method, designated as a specific tax, permits a state, in place of an ad valorem tax on bank shares, to add together total dividends paid the preceding year and the increase in capital, surplus and undivided profits, paid in by stockholders, and to divide this total by the number of shares. The state may tax the shares based upon this amount, but not to exceed the rate on other corporations in proportion to their net profits."

"This method is designed for states which have heretofore taxed national banks upon their entire net income from all sources at a proportionate rate to that assessed upon business corporations. The amount which is the basis of the tax is the equivalent of the entire net income from all sources, but being assessed against the shareholder upon his property in the shares and not a tax upon the bank, it is not open to the objection as an indirect tax on exempt income."

THE INDIVIDUAL YET NEEDED BY BUSINESS

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

SOME seem to think that the day of the individual in business has passed. But they are wrong. While the individual may not attract such outstanding attention as he did in the days of old when institutions were conducted on a smaller scale, he nevertheless is to be found in any large corporation, dominating the situation, giving orders here, co-operating there, and shouldering the responsibility of keeping a large group of lieutenants, captains and privates working in union and moving forward under the banner of progress. And all of these are held accountable to the public because the public has entered into a partnership agreement with the corporation through purchase of stock.

Welfare of Workers
Even in the gigantic mergers that have taken place within the last two years there remains more than ever the necessity for a leader, an aggressive personality, whose duty it is to see that basic principles are not forgotten, that the rights and privileges of the individual workers and the customers they serve are as well provided for as in the smaller business units.

It is gratifying to note that our corporations are giving more and more concern to the welfare of their workers. Numerous benefit organizations have been formed, opportunities offered for advancement of education and position, hospital service established and insurance and retirement pensions provided.

This general humanitarian movement in reality is the outgrowth of analysis, which has disclosed the need of improving the well-being of our individual workers, realizing at the same time that our institutions will benefit.

PREPAREDNESS IN BUSINESS

By R. S. HECHT,

American Bankers Association.
My observations for many years, both as an employee and as an executive, have convinced me that the reason some men and women go ahead and others do not is that some keep themselves constantly prepared to accept and fulfill larger duties and responsibilities as they offer, and some do not.

Grant, as we must, that there is a certain element of luck in the conditions under which opportunity for promotion comes to different men and women, we nevertheless must also see that it is each individual's own state of preparedness which determines his ability to seize opportunity if and when it comes, and having seized it, to succeed in meeting the greater demands which it inevitably places upon him.

Real advancement never means going ahead to easier tasks, but always to harder ones. Opportunity for advancement is worthless unless in accepting it you are able to carry with you the abilities and qualifications that prepare you to meet the heavier exactations that are an inherent part of opportunity.

It is far better to go into action in the field of enlarged responsibility prepared and qualified, rather than that you and the institution you work for shall be exposed to the hazard of your having to build up to new responsibilities after having assumed them.

The new spirit of all business seeks to prepare its people in advance through education for the higher duties it holds in store for them.

Bank Bandits Active

The greatest number of bandit raids on American banking over recorded in the figures of the protective department of the American Bankers Association were reported during the six months ending last February. Bank members of the association reported for investigation 311 forgery cases, 107 holdup robberies, 16 burglaries, 2 sneak thefts and 8 mortgage swindles while non-member banks, numbering less than half the total enrolled in the association, suffered 86 holdup robberies and 9 burglaries, non-members being burglarized or held up once for every 89 banks, as compared with once for every 164 member banks. The association detective agents caused the arrest of 143 of the 236 bank criminals apprehended during the period covered.

The association's report on these conditions urges support of the movement to provide city police departments with radio-equipped cruising automobiles which have proved particularly effective in Cleveland and Detroit in the broadcasting of alarms and the closing in on criminals immediately after or even in the midst of the perpetration of crimes. Last year the average time elapsed between the receipt of radio calls by these cars and the 1325 arrests which followed was one minute and forty-two seconds, the report says.

Tires of Nude Life Experiment

German Scientist Has Had Enough of Primitive

Los Angeles—Primitive life seems to have palled on Dr. Friedrich Ritter, noted German scientist, although his affinity, Frau Doran, with whom he ran away, still clings to romance in the raw on the lonely Galapagos island off Ecuador.

This is the observation of Charles S. Howard, San Francisco globe trotter, who visited the couple in the course of his 66-day voyage from Florida on his yacht Sarah.

"The doctor and Frau were in the nude when we first saw them," said Howard, "but they donned clothes to greet us. They were so excited to see us they were almost irrational in their joy."

"I asked the doctor if they ever planned to return to civilization. 'Well, maybe, but she says no, never,' he replied. So I guess the doctor, at least, is kind of tired of the primitive life and of his dictum of denying himself all food except fruit."

"He wears long hair and talks as though he considers himself inspired; but you can find a lot of folks like that without leaving California."

Ritter's trip to the island was promoted by desire to escape the "boredom of civilization" and for the purpose of testing certain scientific theories relating to primitive nutrition and dietetics.

He left Berlin in July, 1929, with his woman companion, whom he had restored to health and who had expressed a wish to share his experiments. He spent his entire fortune on the trip.

The journey was made by way of Ecuador, where the couple bought a small boat to complete their travel to the Galapagos group—about 600 miles distant. Setting up a primitive domicile in the wilds of the island of their choice, the doctor and his companion engaged in testing the effect on their systems of a diet combining raw and cooked food, with raw cereals predominating.

Shooting Bull Is Not Profitable, Man Finds

Burtonsville, Md.—Shooting the bull is all right if one uses no more dangerous weapon than the tongue, but when it comes to shotguns it's an entirely different matter, William Miles, farmer, discovered.

John Matthias, a farmer, possessed a bull he prized highly. Recently the bull sought new pastures and found them, so it is alleged, in Miles' cornfield.

Montgomery county police arrested Miles on a warrant sworn out by Matthias, charging cruelty to animals.

The warrant set out that Miles lost patience with the bull, blazed away with a shotgun and then left the wounded animal to suffer.

Ernest Des Forges, 16, 11705 S. Lafayette avenue, Chicago, drowned in Channel lake, Saturday night.

Alfred Cuykendall, 28, 1141 S. Harvey avenue, Chicago, in Lake Catherine, Sunday afternoon.

Charles Stahl, 43, S. California avenue, Chicago, Slocum Lake, near Waukegan, late Sunday afternoon.

Investigation Started

An investigation of the death of Des Forges, who lost his life in Channel lake when his rowboat was submerged after being struck by a motor launch owned by William Ward at 11:30 o'clock Saturday night, is to be made by the state's attorney office.

Ward May be Arrested

Des Forges, and a friend, J. Grisford, also of Chicago, were fishing some 300 feet from shore, when the outboard motor boat of Ward's rammed into the anchored fishing boat. Neither boat had a light, the coroner was informed.

Coroner's Verdict

The following verdict was returned by the jury impaneled Sunday morning by Coroner J. L. Taylor:

"Ernest Des Forges died by drowning in Channel Lake, Lake county, about midnight, Saturday, July 19. From the evidence we, the jury, find the deceased was fishing on an anchored rowboat, and one William Ward, of Channel lake, running an outboard motor boat, ran into him, throwing him into the water. We further find that the said William Ward was operating his motor boat without a light on it. At the time of the accident, his motorboat was out of control."

Grisford, the victim's companion, saved his life by grasping the prow of the launch and hanging on until Ward could lift him into the boat.

Body Is Found

The Antioch Fire department was called to Channel lake and immediately started dragging for the body. Early in the morning, the boat occupied by Richard Allner, Andrew Cob, and George Garland, located the body and brought it to the surface.

Dives to Death

Carl Stahl, 43, California avenue, Chicago, lost his life Sunday afternoon in Slocum Lake, near Waukegan, while diving from his boat in the middle of the lake. His boat drifted to shore, unoccupied, and immediately an effort was made to recover his body which was found Tuesday morning by two fishermen who found the body floating seven feet from the north shore of the lake. Deputy sheriffs had been constantly searching the lake for the body since Sunday, when Stahl was missed and believed to have been drowned.

Ed. Kelly, Chicago, and James Balch, of Slocum Lake, who found the body, brought it to shore and notified authorities, who took the remains to the Waukegan town hall.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death by drowning, according to an announcement by Coroner John L. Taylor. The inquest was held at Slocum Lake Tuesday.*Waves Upset Boat Cuykendall and his nephew, Howard Bong, were in a boat with Howard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bong, John M. Clancy and two others riding in Lake Catherine Sunday. The strong wind had run up a heavy sea and as the heavily laden boat was slightly tipped by one of the passengers moving in his seat, the waves washed against the side and tipped the boat over. Mr. and Mrs. Bong, Clancy and the two others were rescued by a boating party while Cuykendall died without sinking beneath the water. The body of Howard has not yet been recovered late this afternoon.

An inquest resulted in a verdict of accidental drowning in the Cuykendall case although members of the Antioch fire department who worked over him when the body was first brought to shore, said that there was no water in his lungs.

Calls for Help

Elmer Amen, Chicago, sank to his death in the waters of Lake Zurich Saturday, when he, accompanied by Otto and Carl Boarduid, Carl Hagemann and John Stepp, all of Chicago, were swimming out to the raft at Lake Zurich when suddenly Amen, who was trailing the others, started threshing about in the water, called for help and sank. His companions swam to him, but his body was not found for 4 minutes. It was found within six feet of the raft which is located 200 feet from shore in nine feet of water. The coroner's verdict was accidental drowning.

SUNDAY'S RESULTS

Silver Lake, 8; Somers, 7.
Wilmot, 17; Antioch, 7.

Antioch's hopes of winning the pennant in the Inter-County league sank lower Sunday with a crushing defeat administered by the Wilmot Pirates, 17 to 7, on the latter's grounds.

In fact, there is now no possibility of the locals landing in first place, or even in second place, as only five more games remain on the schedule. By winning all five of the remaining games the locals could tie with the Pirates in the event that team lost their remaining five games.

In the event that Silver Lake lost the remaining games the team would close the season with 6 wins and 6 losses, 500 per cent, and Antioch by winning every remaining game would wind up the schedule with 5 victories and 7 defeats, for an average of .416, or one game short of tying with the league leaders.

Three wins for Antioch and the same number of defeats for Somers will result in a tie for the two tallenders.

Pirates Rampant

Nineteen hits, many of them tagged for extra bases, were rung up by the Pirates off the offerings of Howard Mastne last Sunday in the Inter-county league clash, and 17 counters had crossed the plate when the smoke had cleared. The locals also had banged out many safe drives, 14—enough to win any ordinary ball game, but the scattered wallop produced only 7 runs.

Only about half of the regulars showed up.

"Local Investment—Try First at Home"

"Try First at Home" has become a national slogan. It was originated to counteract the very human tendency that "the grass across the way is greener"; it has become a national slogan because it has proved itself! There is only one place in the world where you can spend your dollars AND SEE THEM WORK FOR YOU. Where you can have them return to you with big dividends. That is in your community. They are emblems of your civic loyalty and interest. They work for you by giving you a greater and more prosperous community—good city government, with law and order—improved schools and churches—better streets—and increased service and business facilities.

NOWHERE ELSE is the purchasing power of your dollar greater than in your own town!

NOWHERE ELSE can the comforts, conveniences and necessities of life be secured at a lower cost! NOWHERE ELSE will your money buy for you the careful, personal service characterized by individual interest that is rendered you by your community!

What sense is there in sending these dollars out of town for the things you need, when your local business and professional men can supply these needs—yes, supply them with better quality and at a lower cost? They do not say "Keep your dollars here"—they merely say

TRY FIRST AT HOME

The glamour of "out-of-town" shopping fades for the man or woman who realizes that the dollar spent "out of town" never returns to benefit either them or the community in which they live.

The "out-of-town" dollar goes into the structure of some other community's prosperity, depriving OUR community of just that much business energy and building force, and in no way making it possible for OUR OWN COMMUNITY INTERESTS TO INCREASE THE VALUE OF OUR SERVICE TO YOU!

TRY FIRST AT HOME—the "out-of-town" dollar is gone forever; the "home-spent" dollar returns to you in

Wild Creatures His Pets

According to reports from Abyssinia, Ras Taffari, the regent who made himself emperor, lives somewhat after the fashion of the feudal lords of the Middle ages in Europe. Ras likes all kinds of wild animals and he has quite a menagerie on the grounds around the royal palace at Addis Ababa, the capital of the kingdom of Ethiopia, as it is officially called. The monarch is especially fond of lions and has several fine specimens. He makes pets of the cubs. They can often be seen sleeping or romping around the throne itself.

Ras, who claims to be a descendant of the queen of Sheba and King Solomon, likes to imagine that nature endowed him with many of the qualities of the king of beasts.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Press Well Cared For

Newspaper men visiting the Stockholm industrial arts exhibition this summer will be placed on a steel mast which will rise 250 feet above the exhibition grounds. Glass walls will give the journalists a fine view of the central piazza, where pageants and festivals will be held, as well as a fine panorama of the bay along the shore of which the exhibition is laid out. There will be a number of telephones in private booths so that the correspondents can communicate with their papers, and a continuous press service will keep them informed on the various events on the daily program.

Red-headed Aloysius O'Shaughnessy suggested assuming joint responsibility with Ben Inglepin.

"Blood me for a fool, Captain, but 'taint in the nature of a man to see lady the like o' her put up in the dock with a parcel o' highwaymen and coin-clappers! So if it's all the same to ye, just throw me in irons, and I'll swear out a declaration I was for murkin' every dirty politician in Washington. Or put it how ye will. Shure, we can say 'twas me wrote the letter and all."

An overpowering conviction of meanness, of unceasing malice, tore at Fellowes' heart. A voice within him cried that here was a stronger force than hate, but a second voice issued dryly from his mouth.

"I fear you are the victim of your emotions, doctor. Treason is not a crime to be condoned."

"She knows no more o' treason nor I do o' Boney's gizzard," thred O'Shaughnessy. "The poor lady may be made a mistake, but I'll take me oath there's not a morsel o' harm in her."

"Nathless, she must pay for it." And as the Irishman opened his mouth to reply, Fellowes fell back upon the same argument he had offered Sopher: "The lady, being what she is, will not suffer another to assume her responsibilities."

It was probably from O'Shaughnessy, whose tongue wagged freest, that Cara learned of Fellowes' determination to fight the Badger. Their habit was to exchange the briefest of greetings, but the day the wind swung astern and the sun came out boldly she crossed the deck to where he stood, sweeping the horizon with his glass.

"Do you look for the Badger, Captain Fellowes?" she asked.

"Not yet, ma'am," he answered, choking his surprise.

Her hands clasped together nervously. There was aching appeal in the eyes that met his.

"Oh, sir—is it not sufficient that we—my father and I—should be punished? Captain Collishawne is not responsible for what we did. He acted as an enemy, to serve his king. And he had his orders—from Commodore Hardy, from Admiral Cockburn. And my Lord Wellington was behind them all, for 'twas he supported us with the ministry."

Fellowes forced himself to speak, harshly, mechanically.

"Captain Collishawne is, as you say, an enemy, ma'am. As an enemy, 'tis my duty to destroy him."

"But to seek him out! To hunt him—as one beast hunts another! Must you and James, two of all the world, be deadly enemies for—for?" her voice sank to a whisper—"my mistake?"

She trembled so that he put out his arm to steady her, conscious of the curious glances of the officers on the far side of the poop; his mind was in a whirl—hate, jealousy, pity, anger, resentment and an emotion he would not name, even to himself, boiling and seething in one nauseous brew. Touching her, he had a mad desire to embrace her, to cover her mouth with kisses. If that was his price, she'd pay, he had no doubt. She was no coward. But he heard himself say gently:

"You make too much of this, Miss Inglepin. We are all on the rock of fate."

"Fate?" she repeated, drawing away from him. "You should say hate. 'Tis an ill thing, sir, and recoils upon him who sponsors it."

Fellowes bowed his head.

"That is a point you need not argue with me," he said. "I have set myself a task, and I am bound in honor to complete it."

"To say James?" her voice rang scornfully. "You are over-confident."

"It may be." He paused, fumbling for words to phrase his thought. "If I might, I'd serve you, I shall have no happiness of what I do. And yet I hate him! I hate him as I hated Chater—and what satisfaction have I had from Chater's death? But I'll not rest until he's punished—or I am dead."

Her face was tragic; there was no scorn in her voice when she replied:

"Yes, you are a proud man. And I am a proud woman. If my back had been beaten raw, I'd hate, too. Oh, you do well to hate, Lion! But 'tis me you should hate. You should be to the most there, and flog me as James flogged you, flog me while your sailors look on, and lick their lips and gloat as men do at sight of another's pain. Wouldn't that satisfy you? For I deserve it, I who have brought you to misery, two men!"

Her voice broke in a wail, and Fellowes beckoned O'Shaughnessy to him. "Conduct Miss Inglepin below, doc-

The initial problem in trapping the Badger, as Fellowes saw it, was to toll her out of the blockading squadron, without exposing himself to one of the pinching maneuvers at which the Britishers were adept. But sooner or later, he was sure, the Badger would beat the waters south of the Hook—that is, if she was still on the station. And south of the Hook he'd cast his line.

Fellowes so contrived it that the brig sighted the highlands of Navesink an hour after sunrise of a clear, warm morning, but there were no signs of the Badger. Fretting and stewing, he ran southeast a day's sail, then lay to, and the next morning beat back against a contrary wind, plotting his course farther off-shore, on the chance that he might intercept the Badger returning from one of innumerable errands entrusted to Collishawne. But she was nowhere to seaward, and in the night he wore ship and lashed south, planning to repeat his first approach.

This time he succeeded. At noon the hall came from the lookout, perched precariously astride the fore royal yard: "Sail ho! Mebbe a p'mi to sta'b'd, sir."

Fellowes caught a glass from the nautical rack, and ran for'ard, beckoning Cuffee to follow him up the ratline to the foretop. Cuffee, staring across the eddying banks, made a little chuckling sound with his tongue, twinkle eyes gleam.

"Dat him Badger, mars'r."

"Sure of it?" Fellowes queried almost fearfully.

"'Spose yo' take him glass, yo' see."

Slowly, very slowly, Fellowes swept the sea to sta'b'd. Yes, there could be no mistake about that tops'l. Fellowes, himself, had helped to set it.

He trembled so violently that Cuffee stabled him on the confined platform of the top.

"Don' yo' fuss, mars'r," crooned the negro. "We goin' bust him Collishawne. Yah, him Big Sarpent goin' go blam-blam-blam! Dat de bes' Long Tom Cuffee ever see."

Half-shamed, Fellowes smiled crookedly.

"I was afraid something had happened to him. Does he see us?"

"Oh, my aunt, dar him r'yal drop! Him come plenty quick."

Fellowes halled the deck.

"Wear ship! We'll stand off across his bows on the sta'b'd tack. Bent to quarters, Mr. Spencer. Cuffee, you might take a shot with the Long Tom."

Fellowes lingered in his lofty aerie while the drum thumped hysterically, and the stamping of sea boots beat an accompaniment. For'ard, almost at his feet, he could see the gleaming bulk of the Big Sarpent, swinging to la'b'd in response to the pressure of handspikes. Cuffee a figure of demonical energy, issuing instructions, adjusting the wad, shoving home the round shot with the last thrust of the rammer.

"Who's him match? Gib him Cuffee. Yah, Big Sarpent, hiss yo' song!"

The brass throat of the gun clanged resonantly, and a jet of flame and smoke spat out in the Badger's direction. A rumble of cannon fire responded, muffled by the mist; the Badger's chase guns. And Fellowes listened for the whirr of splash of shot, but the range was too great—probably too great for the twenty-four-pounder. Yet it was essential to give the sloop-of-war a mark to head for.

Fellowes halled the saluting master on the poop:

"Mr. Noggle! We must reduce speed. See if you and Chips can manage a drag to tow stern. In haste!"

"Aye, aye, sir," assented Noggle.

Leaping from the forehains to the deck, Fellowes stumbled against Cara Inglepin, balanced on an arn chest to peer over the bulwarks.

"You have no business here, ma'am," he exclaimed. "We may be in action any moment."

"Is—it James?" she asked hesitantly.

He nodded.

"And you sail away from him?"

"I can't fight the Badger under the guns of the San Domingo and a razee and perhaps a couple of thirty-sixes."

"'Tis a lure, then?" she said. "He doesn't know you are stronger. He'll come after you—so bravely—and you—you will hammer him to pieces."

"If I can keep away from him," Fellowes answered grimly. "At close range 'would be a different matter."

"Surely, sir, yo' have accomplished enough by this cruise?" she persisted. "And is it honorable to sacrifice other men's lives in a private quarrel?"

Fellowes flushed angrily.

"By your leave, Miss Inglepin! This is war. I fight my country's battles equally with my own. Captain Collishawne is more than my personal enemy."

Reached Enemy's Heart Through His Stomach

Mrs. Laura Fraser, the original Becky Thatcher of Mark Twain's stories, related shortly before her death at Hannibal, Mo., how she had once gone through an experience as thrilling as any that Twain had created for his fiction. During the Civil war Mrs. Fraser's husband was a strong southern sympathizer and as he was a doctor he delved federal authorities in treating wounded Confederate soldiers. He finally was put in prison about the time that Gen. John McNeil came to Hannibal to suppress the southern sympathy and camped in Mr. Fraser's front yard while he picked out ten prisoners of Confederate leanings to be "converted" by a firing squad. Mrs. Fraser, fearing the inclusion of her husband, invited the general to a specially prepared dinner and he was so overcome with culinary delights that he ordered Fraser's release. But he reconsidered the next day and had him re-arrested, though he spared his life.—Detroit News.

Ancient Scissors Found

Behind old paneling in the house known as Queen Elizabeth's Lodge, in Epping forest, England, a pair of scissors believed to be 250 years old were recently found. They were covered with rust, but when this was removed it was found by the mark stamped on the blade that they had been made in the Seventeenth century. They have been placed in the Guildhall museum in London.

Make Profitable Use of Time to Get Results

Sometimes we are so utterly dull and out of touch with the stimulus of life that we complain how time hangs upon our hands. The truth is, time neither flies nor remains still. It moves onward at exactly the same rate today as it did a million years ago. What is happening is an alteration in our reaction to time. All these points of view arise out of a changed state of our mind. One moment we see things one way—the next the same things have an entirely different color. That is why, one day, time seems to be fleeting, and another to be slow. Time is always with us, and all we have to do is to occupy ourselves in a way that will produce the best and greatest results. This means thinking on a constructive basis, so that every moment of life is spent in such a manner as to have in it but a minimum of waste.—Exchange.

Uncover Ancient City

The French government and Yale university are uniting in the work of uncovering the ancient city of Doura on the Euphrates river. The scientists have been excavating for about a year and the objects unearthed are said to have thrown new light on the little-known era of 300 A. D., as well as the obscure Parthian civilization.

Up to the present time the finds consist mainly of parchments, records, of no importance in themselves, being mostly minor legal documents, but of great value in supplying names of officials and other data of the city.

OBSTACLE

(By D. J. Walsh)

ANDREW LIVINGSTONE, senior partner of the law firm of Livingstone, Blakesley & Moore, was in love. Strange after all these years of contented bachelorhood that he should fall in love. He had had ample opportunity, of course. Seldom he returned to his club at night than he was not handed a sheaf of mail, the majority of the square, white envelopes being addressed in feminine handwriting. He was overwhelmed with invitations to week-end parties, debutante receptions, bridge parties, theater parties, motor parties, and in spite of all that he had fallen in love with his secretary, Leila Candice, who was at this moment in the office adjoining his, her expert white fingers busily engaged at her typewriter. He had always liked to watch her fingers; he even thought the third finger of the left hand bore a narrow band.

He had been glad when he had employed her a year before that her name was Mrs. Leila Candice. He had had two or three secretaries before, unmarried, gay, frivolous, uninterested in their work, young; of course, Mrs. Candice was not old; possibly twenty-eight or twenty-nine, but she had given him to understand she needed work badly. She had never been late, had exhibited exceptional merit and ability, and he loved her.

But, of course, there was Peter! She had not mentioned Peter for several weeks after she had become his secretary and he had begun to think perhaps she was a widow. In fact, he was so sure she must be a widow that he had suggested a little dinner, after which they would return to the office and finish up that particular job over which they had been working together.

"Thank you, Mr. Livingstone; that would be lovely, but I can run home on the subway and fix Peter's dinner and be back by the time you have returned. But I do thank you so much."

He had not enjoyed his dinner that night, although his favorite waiter had taken particular pains to serve him carefully with the food he liked best. So there was Peter, hum-m-m-m. Well, he was a lucky dog—Peter was—that girl with her blue eyes and molasses yellow hair coiled low on her neck—no bobbed hair there! And she knew how to wear clothes, too, although she didn't have many changes, that was true. He hoped Peter would get better soon—he must be an invalid, or his wife wouldn't have to work—and relieve the strain on her. That was eight months ago. As time went on he was not so solicitous about Peter's improvement. Presumed she thought him heartless old wretch, never asking about him. Selfish old fool, forty-four years old and falling in love with a married woman and jealous of her husband! He should ask about Peter's health, of course, but he could not bring himself to say "your husband" or even "Mr. Candice."

She mentioned Peter often in their little chats over his big desk; of his fondness for the water and boats; of their rides on top of busses on moonlight nights—moonlight nights—and Leila. Oh, yes, Andrew Livingstone, brilliant lawyer and club man, was very much in love. Every morning, before pressing the buzzer that connected his office with his secretary's, all these thoughts went through his head.

She came in, a notebook in her hand. She wore a pleated silk skirt of white and a blue blouse with a round white collar and white cuffs. She looked better in that outfit than most of the "debs" looked in their pretty frocks.

She seated herself in her usual chair across from him and opened her notebook.

"Three engagements this morning. One at ten with Mr. Smythe, Mrs. Luce at eleven-thirty and luncheon at one with Mr. Crockett." Then she added, "You look tired, Mr. Livingstone. Are you well?"

She was always solicitous about his health and it gave him a comfortable warm feeling about his heart. It had been such a long time since he had been anyone who really seemed to care. He liked it.

"Spring fever, I think, Mrs. Candice. And yesterday I went on a trip on Adams' yacht down along the sound and I was bored to death! And am tired out—those social hours make me sick!"

She smiled brightly. "Peter and I had such a beautiful day! You will laugh when I tell you where we went—Coney Island! We sat in the sand and watched the surf and had dinner at a little Italian place and—"

"Please take a letter to the Cunard Line. I think I shall go to Europe in July for a vacation. I need it."

So Peter was able to go to Coney Island, was he, and sit in the sand and eat spaghetti? Well, that was that. He'd go to France. Maybe he'd get over this fool notion, this hoping; he dictated rapidly.

"I think that will be splendid for you, Mr. Livingstone. You do look tired—and need a rest. And if you do not mind I think I shall take my vacation at the same time and go up in the mountains to my aunt's little camp there. Peter and I will be regular Indians—play and sleep and eat and hike. We love it."

She left the office on Saturday for her vacation and he was to sail the following week. He was going to drive up to Boston to see his sister for a few days before sailing, and would leave his car there. While he told her all this, when she came in to say goodbye, he held her hand in his—the little white hand he loved to watch. She was looking up at him. He wanted to hold her close and forget Peter.

"If you drive to Boston," she was saying, "you will go straight by the road that leads into our camp. If—if you have no particular dislike for camp life, won't you stop and have lunch with Peter and me on your way up? We would love to have you."

Her blue eyes told him she wanted him. He didn't want to meet Peter, but he accepted with alacrity. It would mean he could see her again. It was very hard to say "goodby" to Leila Candice.

She gave him minute directions to their camp and he found her waiting for him when he drove up the next Tuesday. She wore a blue checked gingham dress and her usually sleek hair was disheveled by the wind.

"We are having a beautiful time already, Skipper, the dog, and Peter and me. Had a picnic yesterday and saw such a beautiful sunset over the mountains." She whistled shrilly, a peculiar call. "Lunch is ready and Peter is down at the trout stream fishing," she explained.

He was sitting with his back to the door watching Leila as she moved about in the little kitchen beyond, when he heard steps on the gravel walk. Peter was coming! He found himself tense as he waited. He was going to meet Peter at last, and then something whirled through the air and landed, plop, on the knees of his carefully pressed trousers. It was a very small, very slippery, very much alive fish, attached to a string that extended over his shoulder to the out-of-doors behind him. He jumped to his feet and swung around. He heard Leila gasp and then—

"Peeter! You naughty, naughty boy. What have you done?"

"I'm sorry, muvver," said the small, sun-brown overall-clad boy in the doorway, as he slowly wound up the slack line on his reel, drawing the squirming fish toward him across the floor. "You see, Skipper jumped at the fish and I freed it up in the air to fool him, and the line unwound and it came straight in the door." He turned to Livingstone and looked up at him with Leila Candice's blue eyes.

"I'm sorry," he repeated, "but I said I must be a very, very good boy when the neatest man in all New York came to see us today, and she said she liked him most as much as she did me."

"Peter," said Andrew Livingstone, "how long will it take you and me to drive to the nearest telephone? I have two calls to make—one to cancel my reservation to Europe and the other to tell my sister I'm stranded for a week or so by the wayside, but she can expect us all later on our honeymoon."

Tanning Process Traced to Prehistoric Times

Since the days when our early ancestors used sand and wood ashes in preparing the skins of animals for clothing, until the present day when close to one hundred chemicals totaling many thousands of tons yearly are consumed by the leather industry, chemistry has played an important part in leather production, says Chemical Markets, business magazine of the chemical industry.

Primitive man did not realize that when he used sour milk and various oils and fats he was a pioneer in the use of tannic acid, neatfoot oil and tallow in leather manufacture. And, of course, he could not foresee that in modern days the bichromate would replace his oak bark methods, reducing the 12-months' process to a 12-day one.

The history of tanning goes far back into prehistoric times, being an even earlier stage of man's development than agriculture. The original process of curing skins was probably simply cleaning and drying. Later on smoke, sour milk, various oils and brains of animals were found to improve the texture of the skin. Even today the seal killed by the Eskimo is still skinned by the family, and the hide chewed into pliable material for garments by the women.

But among primitive peoples it must be remembered that the leather was in but slight danger of decay or destruction by vermin, since the garment was in constant use. As civilization progressed, and man changed his clothes, better preservative methods became necessary.

Confused
According to Marco Hellman, the financier, romance is fast disappearing in the advance of sophisticated youth.

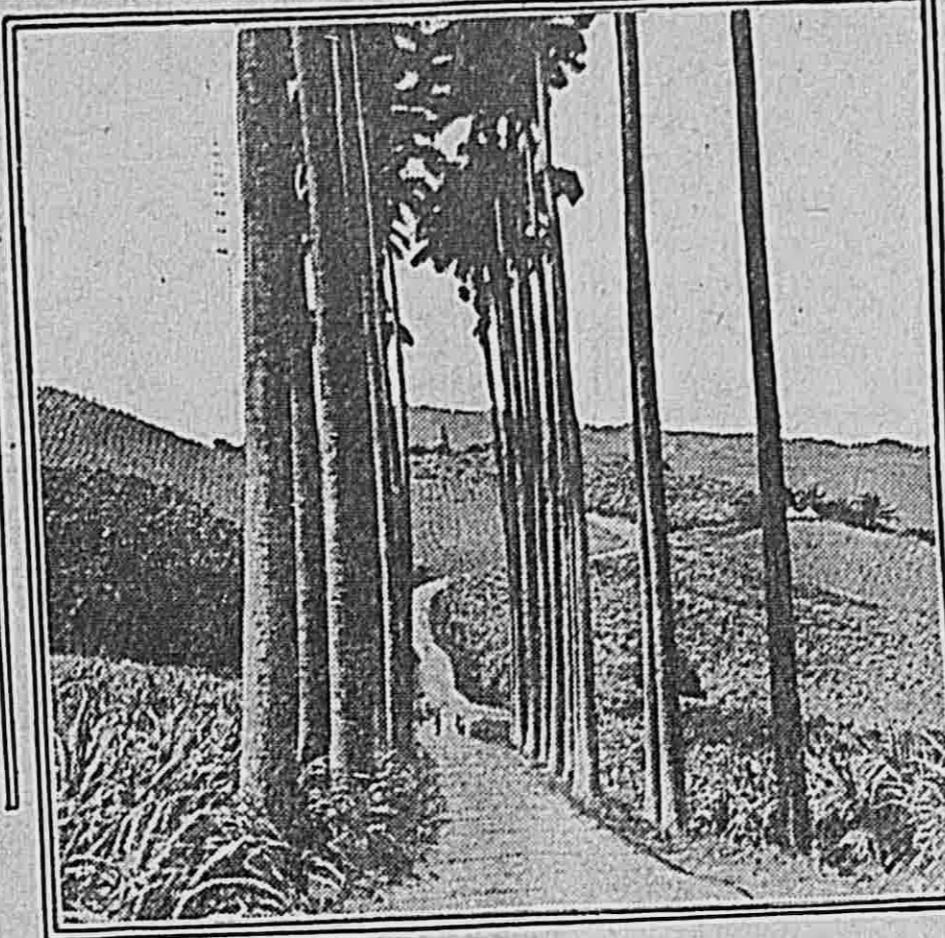

"The other day," he said, "a very charming young lady in my employ tendered me her resignation."

"What's this?" I asked in surprise.

"Are you dissatisfied with your position, or is it that you are going to get married?"

"I—I am not quite sure," stammered the girl. "You see, sir, last night, Mr. B. came and made me a proposition but he went about it in such a businesslike way that I'm not quite sure whether he wants me for a wife or a confidential secretary. But I know he wants me."

Air Route Islands

A Vista in Barbados, West Indies.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THREE island domains that seem destined to take on new importance with the development of air traffic were passed over by the Graf Zeppelin on its recent triangular voyage from Europe to South America, to North America, and back to Europe.

The Cape Verde Islands were sighted first. They lie far from the usual ship lanes and are visited by few travelers. One globe-trotter pronounced them "the most uninteresting place I have visited."

It is true that the Cape Verde Islands do not compare with the exquisite Canaries, nearer Europe, in beauty, human interest, faunal features, or salubrious breezes. Baedeker ignores them. Yet, now that they are taking on new importance as land falls on aerial routes, the islands may be rescued from innocuous obscurity.

The naturalist would find on one of the islands a seabird unknown elsewhere and a plant-eating lizard. The student of economic geography would be interested to work out the reason why the inhabitants of one of the group, Brava, have developed a landowning propensity which leads them into constant legal wrangles, while a spirit of "come what may" and indifference to ownership of anything infests the other islands.

The islands recently developed their trade to a point where the state department established a new consulate on the Island of Sao Vincente (St. Vincent).

St. Vincent is one of the 14 islands of the group which form a crescent about 300 miles west of Dakar, the easternmost city on the African continent. Porto Grande, capital of St. Vincent and one of the few large port towns in the islands, is built in a well protected location with high mountains at its back and in front the massive heights of the Island of St. Anthony almost shutting in a wide, deep harbor from the sea.

Total Area Is Small.

The 14 islands could be placed on the state of Rhode Island and only a few rugged edges would extend over the borders. Sao Thilago (St. Jago), the largest of the Cape Verdes, is slightly smaller in area than the city of Los Angeles, while the smallest island is measured by square yards.

Seldom does a volcano become an asset. But volcanic eruptions have contributed largely to the fertility of Barbados. When the sun was obscured throughout one day in May 1912, the Barbadians were panic stricken; but when the gentle rain of black dust subsided, the deposit was found to be ash from an eruption of St. Vincent's Soufriere, nearly 100 miles to the west, and an enrichment for the soil.

Hot, Dusty Bridgetown.
Bridgetown, the island capital, is a hot, dusty city of about 30,000 people. It is especially busy on Fridays when planters flock to town for business and buying. Its cathedral was built principally by funds obtained from a lottery authorized by the legislature, after the original building had been blown down by a hurricane in 1780.

Labor is so plentiful that men compete with beasts of burden. But this condition was greatly improved by the use of considerable Barbados labor in building the Panama canal.

The third important island visited by the Graf Zeppelin was Porto Rico. But it was really San Juan, the capital city, rather than the island to which the great air liner paid its respects. After cruising over the city, it turned sharply northward and put out over the Atlantic.

San Juan has a population of more than 114,000 and has nearly doubled in size since the island came under American control. It was from San Juan that Ponce de Leon set sail, like another Jason in search of the Golden Fleece, for the fulfillment of his charming, if boyish, dream of finding the Fountain of Youth, which we all recall, resulted in the discovery of the southernmost end of the United States.

San Juan was a settlement half a century before St. Augustine, Fla., the oldest town in the United States, came into being, and a full century before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock. It began to take on the semblance of a city. More than two and a half centuries before the United States began to build the White House in Washington, Spain started the construction of the Casa Blanca, the governor's palace.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

Why Were the Witches Burned?

WHO was responsible for the beginning of the "witchcraft mania" which spread over the Massachusetts colony in the latter part of the Seventeenth century, as a result of which nineteen innocent persons were executed and hundreds imprisoned and tortured?

No one has ever been able satisfactorily to explain this phenomenon, save on the ground of religious hysteria, founded upon the line from Exodus which states "Thou shalt not permit a witch to live." But the real beginning of the American witchcraft delusion has never been discovered, except for the fact that in 1692 Rev. Samuel Parris noted that his daughter Elizabeth, aged nine, and his niece, Abigail Williams, aged eleven, were "acting strangely," as he phrased it. The children developed the habit of creeping under tables, uttering peculiar noises and otherwise disturbing the calm of the Puritan settlement—peculiarities which would hardly be noticed at the present time but which the Colonists considered manifestations of the power of the devil.

In view of the general belief in witchcraft, supported by the decisions of some of the greatest legal authorities of England implying the existence of witchcraft and indicating the various degrees with which it might be practiced, the young girls were not punished for mischievous conduct, but were pitied as the victims of the evil one and urged to give the names of the humans who had acted as the emissaries of Satan. Finally, after continued pressure from their elders, they blamed an Indian slave named Tituba; Goody Osborn, a bed-ridden woman whose mind was afflicted by many troubles, and Sarah Grand, a forlorn and friendless creature who was looked upon as being little better than a vagrant.

After a prolonged examination of the children, Doctor Griggs, a local physician, declared that they were not suffering from any ordinary or physical ailment, but that they were possessed by the devil, "undoubtedly projected by the persons whom they named." Viewing the whole matter in the light of present-day knowledge, it is practically certain that the three women had had nothing to do with the "strange" actions of the children, but the public mind was so superstitious and susceptible at the time that almost the entire settlement lent willing ears to the story of the "possessed ones" and, in March, 1692, the preliminary trial of the suspected witches was held.

As was only natural, the accused did not receive fair treatment. No counsel was allowed to plead for them and the judge even bullied them in order to force a confession of their dealings with Satan. The children asserted that they were in intense pain whenever they looked at the "witches" and that they had also been choked, beaten and pinched by the three women in order to make them more amenable to the mandates of the evil one. Who prompted this evidence or through what delusion it had become fixed in their mind, the writers on the witchcraft period at Salem have never been able to throw any light—save that it was probably founded on nothing more than a childish fondness for holding the center of the stage, coupled by the ideas which had been literally forced upon them by their elders.

But their account of the "witchcraft" was believed and the excitement it caused spread like a forest fire. Hundreds of persons of both sexes were accused of having had intercourse with Satan and were thrown into prison. Nineteen were hanged; one, an aged man, was pressed to death, and two more died in prison before the witchcraft madness had run its course.

Finally, the Colonists awoke to the horror of their delusion and bitterly repented their stringent measures to put down the "forces of darkness" as they were alluded to, but it was a long time before the public mind entirely recovered from its witchcraft paralysis, apparently induced by nothing more than the strange actions of two children.

Ah, Balzac Should See This

Penitent—I have stolen a fat goose from a poultry yard!

Priest—That is very wrong.

Penitent—Would you like to accept it, father?

Priest—Certainly I will not receive stolen goods—return it to the man from whom you stole it.

Penitent—But I have offered it to him and he won't have it.

Priest—In that case you may keep it yourself.

Penitent—Thank you, father.

The priest arrived home to find one of his own geese stolen.—Hummel, Hamburg.

The Low-Down on Storms

Recent meteorological investigations show that storms disturb only the denser regions of air within seven miles of the earth's surface. The top limit of most storms is only about a half mile up in the air, and airplanes frequently clear them. As to width, however, a storm may spread over a thousand miles square of territory. The sprawling storms usually are not the dangerous ones.
